
7 Things Every Gay Should Take On A Date

Here are a few suggestions or tips, on what to take with you on a date. (These dating tips are in no particular order...).

1. Your humor - A must. Guys don't want to go out with sour-pusses.
2. Condoms and lube. You never know, but it's best to be prepared. Personally, I try to refrain from sex on the first date, as I've found it helpful to make the guy wait - Drive him crazy with anticipation.
3. Wear clean, neat, tidy and appropriate clothes. It's really amazing just how many guys think they can get away with dirty underwear, shoes that are falling apart, or looking like a construction worker when they go to a really fancy restaurant. Take pride in your appearance.
4. A couple of questions or topics that you can talk about or use as conversation starters or conversation bridges.
5. Breath mints - Keep your breath fresh and pleasant please.
6. Pen & Paper - I rarely go anywhere without these; great for jotting down and exchanging email addresses, phone numbers, Instant Message handles, websites...
7. Emergency money. Long ago, I learned the value of taking change with me for pay phones. If you get in a bind you can call a friend or a relative. Of course if you've got a cell phone - even better. Just remember to turn it off so that you're paying attention to your date and not to all those people who just have to call you. I've also found it helpful to carry enough cash to pay for at least my portion of any meal - even if I've been told that "it's on him".

Wishing you joy and success on your dates,
